

HOUSEHOLDERS GRAB
1,000 TONS OF COAL
AS IT REACHES HERE

Price Unchanged, Though It's Going Up in West and New England.

More than 50,000 tons of anthracite coal, domestic steam, came to New York yesterday from the mines in eastern Pennsylvania, but it was snapped up by dealers for immediate household consumption. Practically none of the 50,000 tons was stored in the yards of the railroads.

New York, so the dealers say, is still apparently unable to realize that there is only enough hard coal coming here for current use, with the result that every man who lays in his winter supply now by dint of bribing his dealer by a premium price is actually depriving somebody else of coal needed for present use.

The big dealers have not yet raised their price for domestic sizes. The figures remain $6.75 a ton in Manhattan and $7 in Brooklyn.

Institutions are feeling the pinch. So are the schools.

More than 50,000 tons of anthracite coal a day is being shipped from the mines to the Great Lakes for the supply of the West and Canada, and those shipments, it was announced today, will continue until late navigation closes at the end of November. After that the 50,000 tons a day can be used to help the East catch up on its fuel. Detroit and other lake cities are crying out over their shortage, and the railroads have responded generously by putting up the price to $8 a ton.

The New England anthracite supply shortage is figured at 1,000,000 tons. Official figures of anthracite production, which are made public by the Coal Trade Journal, show that in the first nine months of 1911 the mines produced 2,774,723 tons, but in this year's corresponding period only 4,588,723 tons.

Corbett Has Fair Chance.
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—The condition of James J. Corbett, who is in the Jefferson Hospital here, is reported as "fairly favorable." The physicians in charge declare that he has a fair hope for recovery, following the operation for appendicitis which was augmented by symptoms of peritonitis.

Stunning "Paris" Millinery for Less Than Half Paris Prices

Our designers see Paris, know Paris, think Paris and interpret Paris in every hat produced in our workrooms. Nothing less than Paris-like exclusiveness and Paris-like style satisfy them, even in the simplest hats they make. Let us give you just a few picture hints selected from hundreds of new hats that are ready to go in the Anniversary Sale to-morrow morning.

Our $12 to $65 Dress Hats reflect the most novel and ambitious efforts of the Premier Modistes of the Queen City of beautiful Millinery—Paris. The values, moderately estimated, are $12 to $65. Dress Millinery Parlors, 2d floor.

Our $4.50 "Tailored" Hats show how thoroughly smart and distinctive a simple hat can be. And they are designed and made by our own people with just as much care and skill as the higher priced millinery. Shown on the Main Floor.

Our $8.50 Trimmed Hats are talked about more and more, especially by new customers who have been paying two to five times that price for their hats. A new series comes from our workrooms to-morrow morning, Second Floor.
